

Goal of the Tulsa Poppy Project

Allow Tulsa to display it's love of the arts.

Educate young and old about the history of the use of the poppy to symbolize sacrifice.

To bring together volunteers to donate their talents and resources to contribute to a largescale art installation in America.

Raise funds to support the lives of our veterans and their families.

To show our Veterans that the world will NEVER FORGET them and their fallen comrades. Encourage locals and visitors an opportunity to participate in this memorial ceremonies to support our veterans.

An opportunity to teach the younger generations of family and community military patriotism past and present.

The aim of this project is to create in America a large art installation of a cascading flow of poppies, based on the original work by Paul Cummins at the Tower of London. The sculpture will be installed at the Tulsa VFW Post 577 building.

The project will be coordinated by Post 577 but is open to all who want to volunteer their talent to make and donate poppies.

Tulsa Poppy Project

We would like to invite you to get involved with the TULSA POPPY PROJECT This will be a community art installation to be set up in May for the 2019 MEMORIAL DAY to remember those that sacrificed so much for our freedoms. This Project is open to individuals, civic groups, organizations and businesses over the months leading up to 2019 Memorial Day.

The poppy flower is an iconic symbol of those lost while serving in our military and those veterans lost after the conflict is over. This project is not to celebrate war but a way we can honor those lost and to insure they are NEVER FORGOTTEN.
